between its role as a regulator of port safety and its aim to promote the commercial attractiveness of UK ports This follows evidence that most ports fail to confirm to Government that they comply with best practice guidance on port safety and the Maritime and Coastguard Agency has the resources to conduct just four port health checks each year Representatives of marine pilots who guide ships in and out of ports lack confidence that the Department for Transport understands their concerns and the requirements of their work and shares their aim of enhancing maritime safety The Committee is opposed to a proposal supported by Government to relax the rules on the granting of pilotage exemption certificates to more junior navigating officers which could jeopardise safety If the Government insists on pressing ahead with this change the Committee recommends that the impact of the change should be monitored Other recommendations include that the Maritime and Coastguard Agency should broaden its safety inspection programme so that it undertakes eight inspections per annum ports should be required to publish statistics on accidents and near misses the Government should use its influence to persuade harbour authorities to accept national standards as to who can be authorised as a pilot if national standards are not adopted the case for legislation on this issue will be compelling
