CHECK DISK

Use this command to analyze directories and files on the designated drive. Check Disk will scan every file in every directory and verify each one against what is called the file allocation table. The space occupied by a file must be recorded in the file allocation table so that it can't be reused by another file. Conversely, space recorded in the file allocation table must belong to a file in order to be usable. If the Check Disk command finds inconsistencies, it will display error messages. In any case, a disk and memory status report will be displayed.
