Cellular Contributors and Consequences of Protein Misfolding and Aggregation Anoop Arunagiri,Emily Sontag,Verena Kohler,Arunkumar Venkatesan,2026-01-20 Proper protein folding to its 3D structure is essential for cellular homeostasis Protein misfolding and aggregation are believed to be major driving factors of neurological diseases diabetes cancer and age associated diseases Understanding why specific proteins misfold aggregate or form biomolecular condensates and why only certain cell types are vulnerable is crucial in unraveling the mechanistic basis of these diseases Most of the protein folding diseases that have been identified are known for their shared disease initiating mechanisms Cell membrane disruption organellar stress self seeding or cross seeding of protein aggregates and prion like cell to cell transmission are some of the well described common pathological mechanisms Two major questions that remain unaddressed include What dictates the aggregation of certain proteins in certain cells and which cellular machineries regulate this process In order to devise therapeutic measures for proteinopathies it is necessary to determine the causes of protein folding problems and examine the cellular damage caused by protein oligomers aggregates or condensates This research topic aims to provide an understanding of the causal factors of protein misfolding aggregation and or condensation in cells how protein misfolding and protein aggregation affect cellular processes and organelles in specific cell types leading to human diseases and the protective cellular mechanisms that tackle proteotoxicity in proteinopathies To gather further insights into the cellular contributors and consequences of protein misfolding and aggregation we welcome articles addressing but not limited to the following themes Protein misfolding and degenerative diseases Biomolecular condensates in proteinopathies Protein folding diseases ER stress and calcium homeostasis Oxidative stress and mitochondrial dysfunction in proteinopathies Cell type specificity of protein aggregation and toxicity Autophagy and proteostasis Protein degradation machineries in diseases Protein homeostasis failure in aging disorders Pharmacological enhancement of protein folding and degradation Literary Gazette and Journal of Belles Lettres, Arts, Sciences, Etc William Jerdan,William Ring Workman,Frederick Arnold,John Morley,Charles Wycliffe Goodwin,1884 Cellular and Molecular Mechanisms Underlying Higher Neural Functions A. I. Selverston,P. Ascher,1994-06-30 Despite the remarkable advances made in molecular neurobiology over the last ten years very little progress has been made towards understanding how the brain performs higher functions cognition behavior learning and memory One of the greatest challenges facing modern neurobiology therefore is the integration of data that comes from disparate levels of analysis This volume presents the results of the Dahlem conference convened to address these issues The purpose of the conference was to bring together brain researchers who approach their work at different conceptual levels to consider how their results might be synthesized into a more integrated view of how the brain works To try and accomplish this two specific examples were chosen the modulation of neural circuits and the phenomena of long term potentiation LTP Neuromodulation has been studied from the molecular to the behavioral level with dramatic breakthroughs at the circuit level over the last five years Due to the possibility that it may be the cellular mechanism for certain types of learning and memory LTP has also been studied at different levels To assist in understanding LTP and neuromodulation at the molecular cellular circuit and behavioral levels the background papers written for the meeting are included in this volume The conference itself was devoted to discussing LTP and neuromodulation from the perspective of each of the different levels and the results of these discussions are presented in the group reports Particular emphasis was given to a consideration of how the rapid progress in molecular and cellular neurobiology can be integrated into systems and behavioral neurobiology Specific suggestions for future research in both areas were discussed thoroughly This volume presents what is most probably the most authoritative up to date assessment of LTP and neuromodulation currently available Goal of this Dahlem Workshop to apply new cellular and molecular concepts to the understanding of plasticity in synapses cells local circuits and defined systems in the mature brain Problems of Life and Mind George Henry Lewes, 1891
