

THE TRANSALL SAGA

By Gary Fawcett
Illustrated by Steve Murray

15 Year old Mark Harrison was hiking alone in the Magister Woods Ranger area, suddenly, he saw a flashing light and a bright wall. Curious, Mark climbed atop a rock to the overhang. It was a bright, orange and blue light, dancing with colors he had never seen before. Excitedly, he fell the hole of a snake, and fell off the rock, into a bright light.

When he awoke Mark realised that he was not so long away from the snake hole, and, for the first time, looked at his surroundings. There was a forest, composed of... red green and blue? Suddenly, a large creature attempted to attack him, Mark jumped up and pushed the nearest branch, the lowest branch.

With the help of his new companion, Wills, Mark began to collect food and fashioned a shelter from stone, sticks, and leaves.

One day, Mark found something strange in the woods, it was a tree, it was determined to find who the arrow belonged to. On the next morning trip, he encountered the smoking thing again. The smoking thing was chasing up something in a tree, Mark caught the tree and then the creature crashed down on top of him. Mark pulled the arrow out and ate the creature.

One evening, Mark went up to an evening night. There, sitting in the dark to see something new, was a group of people of about 1000 other people to people. They, however, had a different look and color of people. He learned that they were called Larks. He decided to offer the others left, to try to talk to her. This is why frightened by them, and not easy to what, needed to be a protective role.
