

Right: TAPPING

a PLUCKED WINGLET

If your bird is happy to eat while on the glove, this is a good indication of it being at a low flying weight. Thus the initial weight and build in the training process from then.

Lower:

post-training, you must always keep your bird secured on the glove during the training process by using the hook with a falconer's band to the glove. The bird should always face towards you when on the glove's band - do not allow the bird to turn its back on you or sit sideways on the glove, as this could break some of its tail and wing feathers.

Above & right: PLUCKING

As the bird becomes used to the falconer, they will show little fear towards you and will eagerly accept their feeding time.
