Puck's Library ,1889 American Song: T-Z and indexes Ken Bloom,1996 Dying For A Voice To Be Heard Mary Baker,2019-09-09 I entitled my book Dying for a Voice to Be Heard because as a child the adults in my life wanted me to be silent My own mother did not want my siblings and me to tell anyone about my father s abuse because she didn t want us My father didn t want us to tell anyone because he didn t want to pay child support or go to jail My own grandmother did not like me because of the complexion of my skin I remember sitting at the table being happy and smiling and she looked at me and said A girl like you should not be smiling I could not comprehend why a girl like me should not be smiling and I could not ask my grandmother why she said that because I would have been in trouble The worst part of my childhood was I had no one to run to I couldn t tell anybody and there was nobody to save me Everyone knew we were held prisoners in our own home However everyone stayed silent It came to a point where we understood why we had to stay quiet my siblings and I We knew if we ran to our mother s house she would not nurture or support us However if we kept silent and stayed with our father at least we would have support and food on the table and a bed to sleep in In order for us to have the basic things that kids should automatically have However with having the basic needs met as a kid it required us to be physically and emotionally abuse We had to take the frustration of being silent almost caused me to almost commit suicide I felt there was no reason to live I had to make a choice I came to a decision that I was going to commit a sin and take my life My choice was I was going to have a say in the direction my life was going When I finally left my abusive father at thirteen I knew I would never return I obtained my voice to say no more I would not accept this drama in my life anymore I was dying inside as a little girl just wanting to be heard but since I made that first step to my journey in life I haven t stopped talking The Spectator ,1949 A weekly review of politics literature theology and art
