Reading-to-Write Linda Flower,Victoria Stein,John Ackerman,Margaret J. Kantz,Kathleen McCormick,Wayne C. Peck,1990-09-20 The Social and Cognitive Studies in Writing and Literacy Series is devoted to books that bridge research theory and practice exploring social and cognitive processes in writing and expanding our knowledge of literacy as an active constructive process as students move from high school to college This descriptive study of reading to write examines a critical point in every college student's academic performance when he or she is faced with the task of reading a source integrating personal ideas and creating an individual text with a self-defined purpose. Offering an unusually comprehensive view of this process, the authors chart a group of freshmen as they study and write in their dormitories, recording their think-aloud strategies for reading, writing, and revising their interpretation of the task and their broader social, cultural, and contextual understanding of college writing. Flower, Stein, and colleagues convincingly conclude that the legacy of schooling in general makes the transition to college difficult and more important than the assumptions students hold and the strategies they use in undertaking this task. This play a significant role in their academic performance. Embracing a broad range of perspectives from rhetoric, composition, literacy research, literary and cultural theory, and cognitive psychology, this rigorous analysis treats reading to write as both a cognitive and social process. It will interest researchers and theoreticians in rhetoric and writing, teachers working with students in transition from high school to college, and educators involved in the links between cognition and the social process.

Creative writing as a method for promoting writing competence Hanna Cieslak, 2022-01-10 Seminar paper from the year 2008 in the subject Didactics - Common Didactics - Educational Objectives - Methods grade 1-3 Ruhr University of Bochum language English abstract Reading and writing are central key competences of everyday life in society. Without the corresponding skills, it is becoming increasingly difficult to participate in life in our literate society. Teaching writing skills to pupils in short SuS is thus a fundamental task of school education and upbringing. Based on these findings, this thesis attempts to show to what extent creative writing methods can promote writing among students. In the first chapter, the field of writing itself is explained in more detail. In this context, the first step is to show theoretically what is meant by the term writing process. Then the area of writing strategies is discussed. The focus of this chapter is on writing competence, which entails a definition of this term and explains the different levels of competence. However, writing competences are not only closely related to the writing process and writing strategies but also to writing development. In this context, BECKER, MROTZEK, and B. TTCHER have tried to divide the process of writing development into different levels of development, which are presented in conclusion. The second chapter deals with the field of creative writing. After defining the term creative writing and explaining the aims of using this method, the six method groups of creative writing are presented based on B. TTCHER. Finally, this chapter is dedicated to the question of whether creative writing actually promotes the students' writing competence. In this context, an attempt is made to analyse, on the basis of selected student essays, whether these contain, for example, certain text patterns, lexical or grammatical knowledge, which are components of writing competence and can be further developed through creative writing occasions.
