

A movie poster for "Vampire Femmes". The background is a close-up of a woman's face, wearing dark sunglasses. The reflection in the lenses shows a prison cell with bars. At the top, a dark, castle-like building is silhouetted against a night sky with a full moon. The title "VAMPIRE FEMMES" is written in a stylized font, with "VAMPIRE" in white and "FEMMES" in red, appearing to be written in blood.

everybody in our society today immediately thinks about vampires horror and Transylvania The material has been commercialized throughout the last century dozens of different films and theatrical versions have been brought to life which concern themselves with the history of the dark count the king of all vampires The actual story is hereby often distorted the themes of the novel forgotten and the material reduced to often rather cheap horror stories without the deeper aspects of repressed female sexuality or the threat of modernity that critics have dealt with so often But what are the actual themes of the novel In the following I want to explore some of the themes taking into consideration a few papers by contemporary scholars and then have a look at how far those themes have actually been constructed And I want to start out by making the rather extreme claim that there is no Dracula at all in the novel What I mean by that will become obvious in the progress of my argument
